

Abstract

The present invention relates to in vitro cultured skin substitutes, preferably to in vitro cultured skin substitutes that have improved barrier function. In particular, the present invention relates to the use of such skin substitutes for irritancy testing. The 5 present invention provides improved methods of screening compounds for irritancy activity, as well for identifying novel irritant responsive genes.